

This can help weed out candidates from those who really want the role. But you have to ask; "What kind of company do I want to work for? I want to change the world. How can I do that at a company who's 1st impressions of your corporate culture is that they are behind the times on recruiting tools? How can they possible buy into other ideas?"

